Mario is acting. Harkening back to the heyday of Nintendo. The diversity of music and background graphics is quite impressive. In the game you will go through grasslands, underground mines, rocklands, castles filled with lava, a world at night (world 3), underwater, etc. Each level consists of multiple image layers. There is also a great diversity of enemies, bonuses and other objects. There are a range of puzzles and challenges to solve in the game such as a pipe maze (world 6-2), riding the lakitu through a treacherous sky gauntlet (world 5-2) and running through enemy saturated obstacle courses such as the Hardcore Worlds. Finally you get to fight Mario's nemeses Bowser (who has different abilities depending on the world you face him). The main character, Mario, is relatively easy to control and see. The game involves quite a lot of action and requires speed, agility, careful timing and a bit of good luck. Overall It comes with 50 levels including 8 standard, and bonus worlds like the Lost Map, Hardcore worlds, ...and many more. From the developer: This is fun, and just basically mario. the level feel, sound, and look just like the originals, but different levels. Every thing, however, looks as he just cut and pasted out of the original game. the sounds also sound pasted strongly the death song. My favorite part is that ethier forgot or purposely left out toad who says "thank you mario, but the princess isn't here." You may want to check out more software, such as Super Mario Bros.
